Manufacturing Is Up as Inventories Fall, for January

But St. Louis District Sales for 1938 Are 5% Behind 1937

BUT TRADE MOVES

Stores Restocking After Pickup in Sales Last Half of Year

ST. LOUIS.—(P)—Business ended 1938 on the upbeat in the Eighth Federal Reserve District, and continued to improve during the first half of January, the Federal Reserve Bank reported Tuesday.

Manufacturing showed the biggest gain.

The bank credited the improvement in part to colder weather after a mild fall and earlier winter that dulled interest in seasonal merchandise.

Increased production of manufactured goods was supported by swelling purchases by jobbers and wholesalers, and orders booked since January 1 reflected a continued improvement over last year's figures.

Taken as a whole, however, the rise that began in July, 1938, was not enough to overcome the January-June slump, with the result that trade indices compared unfavorably with 1937.

Seasonal activities—including inventories, repairs and holidays—slowed trade tempo after the Christmas buying boom that exceeded expectations, but in many lines the expected declines failed to appear.

Inventories Reduced

As a result of conservative buying and increased selling, inventories underwent substantial improvement in both wholesale and retail lines.

Purchasing continued in line with well-defined needs, and for the year the volume of retail trade was approximately 5 per cent under that of 1937.

Boot and shoe sales during December showed the best rise over the same month in 1937 with 4.3 per cent in the wholesale column. Other gains ranged from 1.5 to 5.8 per cent for drugs and chemicals. Groceries failed to improve.

Industrial output for 1938 rose from a low point in May to the year's highest in December, steel ingot production reaching 51.5 per cent of capacity compared with 20.5 per cent for the same time in 1937.

Failures Increase

On the other hand, there were 499 business failures in the district during 1938, according to Dun & Bradstreet, involving liabilities of $6,401,000, as against 285 defaults in 1937 involving $4,940,000 in liabilities.

The volume of building permits was smaller, too, in the principal cities. For December, 1938, it was 26.4 per cent less than in November the same year, and for the whole of 1938 was 5 per cent under 1937.

Coal, though it showed moderate improvement toward the end of the year, suffered from the unprecedented mild fall and winter. Illinois mines, for example, produced nearly 1,000,000 tons less in December than in the same month of 1937.

Department store sales for the year were 4.7 per cent under 1937 totals, in a composite average of the district's key cities.

Farm prices continued lower. On January 14 the farm products group of the bureau of labor statistics stood at 67.3 per cent, as against 73.4 per cent on January 15, 1938.

Indications were that greater acreages would be used, particularly in the south, where considerably more land than usual had been plowed for spring planting.

Earl W. Erion, district WPA recreational supervisor of southwest Arkansas, and Ed Wayte, area supervisor of the NYA, were principal speakers Tuesday before the Hope Kiwanis club at its luncheon meeting at Hotel Barlow.

The problem of occupying the leisure time of the youth was the theme of the talk by Mr. Erion, who also outlined part of the 1939 recreational program planned for this area.

Mr. Erion made it plain that the federal agency of recreation did not have a fund to draw from for the purchase of playground equipment—but furnished directors and supervisors of play activities.

Italy Pledged to Maintain Peace, Chamberlain Says

England's Fears Relieved by Hitler's "Moderate" Speech

SPAIN STILL ISSUE

No French-Italian Agreement Likely Until War Is Settled

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Prime Minister Chamberlain answered Adolf Hitler Tuesday with assurance that Britain wanted friendship with Germany, and declared that Premier Mussolini had promised him to "stand loyally" behind the British-Italian agreement.

The British-Italian agreement provided, among other things, for maintenance of the status quo in the Mediterranean, where the parts of the French colonial empire to which Italians recently have laid claims.

Chamberlain told the House of Commons of his January 11-14 visit to Rome. He declared the Spanish civil war was the chief barrier between France and Italy. He said he saw no prospect of an agreement between them until it was ended.

The prime minister also said Mussolini had told him he had nothing to ask of Spain after the war.

Government supporters cheered Chamberlain as he entered the chamber. There was a generally relieved atmosphere after Hitler's address.

Chamberlain declared, "No negotiations are at the present time contemplated between the German and British governments."

Manton Defends Record on Bench

Denies Anything Wrong, as Charged, in Personal Finances

NEW YORK.—(P)—Martin T. Manton, senior judge of the Second United States Circuit Court of Appeals and the nation's highest-ranking jurist next to the justices of the Supreme Court, resigned Monday amid an investigation of accusations that he accepted more than $400,000 in loans from persons interested in cases which came before his bench.

He denied any wrongdoing but said he preferred to step down rather than to "be the central figure in a controversy, no matter what its outcome, that could be seized upon by malicious minds to cast reflection upon the court or to weaken public confidence in the general administration of justice."

His resignation, transmitted to President Roosevelt, is to be effective no later than March 1.

In Washington, Attorney General Murphy said that a "thorough investigation" by the Justice Department would go on; the New York county district attorney, Thomas E. Dewey, said he was considering a "possible criminal prosecution under the income tax laws of the state," and United States District Attorney Gregory F. Noonan said any evidence indicating criminal violation of federal statutes would be put before a grand jury.

Judge Manton, who is 58 and was appointed to the federal bench by President Wilson in 1918 and to the Circuit Court in 1928, made known his decision to quit after it had been stated in Washington by Attorney General Murphy and by Representative Sumners (Dem., Tex.) chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, that he would do so.

"There is nothing in my business transaction in which I have ever been engaged," Manton said, "of which I am in any way ashamed or which to any candid mind could cast a reflection upon my personal or official conduct, whatever might be said of my success or lack of success as an investor."

He had owned "substantial" property, he added, when he first was appointed to the bench, and this property, no law and no canon of judicial conduct called on me to surrender, sacrifice or neglect."

"If I were to consider myself alone," he added, "I would welcome the opportunity to meet any charges that might be brought against me, either as man or as a judge, in my proper tribunal, confident as I am of my own integrity and of my ability to repel every accusation, insinuation or harmful inference."

But, he said, to have retained the robe would have been to bring about a situation "intolerable" to him, and so he had decided to "carry out an intention which I have entertained for some time—to retire from the bench."

Proposed Cuts in State Office Help Are Shouted Down

House Defends Senate Measure Carrying $43,621 Increase

INDUSTRIAL BOARD

Will Act With Governor in Exempting New Industry From Tax

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The house took up in committee of the whole Tuesday the general appropriation bill for state constitutional officers and defeated in rousing voice the initial attempts to reduce expenditures.

The bill, passed by the senate last week, called for an appropriation of $900,000 biennially, an increase of $43,621 over the amount appropriated by the 1937 legislature.

Smith of Randolph unsuccessfully attempted to lop off an additional $120,000 stenoographer for the governor's office, and a $1,000 annual travel expense account for the governor. Smith also futilely fought to reduce the salary of the lieutenant governor's secretary from $1,200 to $900 a year.

The house passed a bill by Bryson of Nevada county to re-create the Agricultural and Industrial commission and make it the official state agency to act with the governor in executing contracts, granting tax exemptions to industries. "The vote was 70 to 12."

The senate rejected for a second time a house resolution, by Baker of Chicot county which would have submitted to the people a constitutional amendment permitting the legislature to pass local fish and game laws.

After more than an hour's debate the senate defeated by a standing vote 11 to 20 a motion by Senator Howell of Pine Bluff to put back on second for the purpose of amendment an administration bill to increase the state driver's license fee from 35 to 50 cents.

The senate then passed the driver's license bill without further discussion, 23 to 9, but defeated the emergency clause.

Two Programs on Cotton Proposed

Senators Bankhead and Smith Have Separate Farm-Aid Bills

WASHINGTON.—(P)—Southern senators discussed at a closed conference Monday separate cotton programs advanced by Senators Bankhead (Dem., Ala.) and Smith (Dem., S. C.), but deferred decision on supporting either. They will meet again Tuesday.

The Alabama senator proposed that the government turn over to growers up to 4,000,000 bales of cotton it now holds a collateral for loans. In return, the growers would be required to reduce new crop production.

"This proposal should increase the price of cotton," Bankhead told reporters. "It would simply use part of the present surplus to replace this year's production."

The government has lent about $500,000,000 on about 11,000,000 bales of cotton and this year's farm program calls for production of 12,000,000 bales of new crop cotton.

Bankhead said his proposal would use up to 4,000,000 bales of the loan cotton to reduce this year's production to about 8,000,000 bales.

Growers with a minimum quota of five acres or less could refrain from planting any cotton and receive their entire quota from loan stock. Other larger growers could receive loan cotton for from 25 to 75 per cent of their quotas.

Bankhead said growers who took advantage of the proposal probably would have to agree not to use their cotton lands "for production of other soil depleting crops for market."

Smith's tentative draft called for a benefit payment of five cents a pound or 32¢ a bale, based on present cotton prices, for farmers who stay within their quota under the 12,000,000 bale production this year.

It also called for use of loan stocks to replace new production but provided that growers pay 5.75 cents a pound for this cotton instead of getting it free as under the Bankhead proposal.

Arkansas FFA Boys Start Safety Drive

Will Attempt to Place Lights on All Horse-drawn Vehicles

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(P)—Arkansas' young future farmers of America have begun a campaign to put reflectors and lights on the state's horse-drawn vehicles in an effort to curtail night highway accidents.

V. H. Wohlford, Hot Springs, director of radio and recreation, who is in charge of the program, said Monday the FFA has 6000 members in 164 chapters and that his organization hopes to contact 8000 farmers by February 28.

Each of these farmers will be asked to sign an agreement to so equip his vehicles for night travel at which time he will be presented material prepared by the state police and highway departments showing case history of accidents occurring through such negligence.

"Our organization," he said, "besides believing in the conservation of our natural resources also believes in the conservation of human life and that we are in a position to contact rural areas which other agencies cannot reach."

He said the program will be carried out with the co-operation of the Arkansas State Safety Council, the traffic department of the state highway commission and the Arkansas state police.

Each chapter co-operating in the program is to receive a certificate signed by Governor Carl E. Bailey.

CHEENNE, Wyo.—(P)—A carload of paintings by the world's master artists, insured for $20,000,000, was held in Cheyenne recently until a warm air circulating system could be installed in their railroad car.

The paintings were en route from the east to the World's Fair in San Francisco.

College Fishing Should Start With Izaak Walton

And now, in the midst of that strange mixture of the learned and the practical which constitutes higher education today, comes a course in finishing.

Columbia University's Teachers' College, which has in the past taught baseball, poultry-raising and piano-tuning, is going to teach fishing. Beginning Feb. 13, Dr. Francois D'Eliscu will survey in eight weekly lectures the whole field of fishing from baits and lures down to cooking or mounting the catch. And John Alden Knight teach an advanced course in "The Theory and Technique of Fresh Water Angling."

Just when one is about to wage indignation at this perversion of the higher education, there comes a quiet voice of remembrance echoing down through the corridors of nearly 300 years. It is the voice of a gentle Izaak Walton, who once fished the untrodden streams of England.

"You know, gentlemen, 'tis an easy thing to scoff at any art or recreation: a little wit, mixed with ill-nature, confidence, and malice, will do it."

"And for you that have heard many grave, serious men pity Anglers, let me tell you, Sir, there may be men that are by others taken to be serious and grave men, who we condemn and pity. Men that are taken to be grave, because nature hath made them of a sour complexion, money-getting men, men that spend all their time first in getting, and next in anxious care to keep it; men that are condemned to be rich, and then always busy or discontented; for these poor-rich men, we Anglers pity them perfectly."

Now if the Columbia anglers will only use old Izaak for their textbook, and teach a coming generation of fishermen to be the philosophers that all good fishermen ought to be, possibly even fishing may be made a fit subject for higher education.

The gentle Walton learned things prevailing forgotten today, and if these may be drawn in at the end of a rod with a fine pickerel, so much the better. Said Walton, counting his many blessings of clean conscience, contentment, and a quiet heart:

"And for most of them, because they are so common, most men forget to pay their praises; but let not us; because it is a sacrifice so pleasing to Him that made that sun, and us, and still protects us, and gives us flowers, and showers, and stomachs, and meat, and content, and leisure to go a-fishing."

The Family Doctor

New Remedies Have Been Developed As Help in Sleeping Sickness

Some people develop a condition in which they are attacked by an irresistible desire to sleep or to pass into a state of unconsciousness which closely resembles sleep. This is called narcolepsy in contrast to prolonged stages of immobility which are called cataplexy and the convulsive stages which are called epilepsy.

Narcolepsy may become so severe that these patients under influence of emotion become unable to move and instead sink to the ground. Occasionally narcolepsy may be traced to some severe inflammation of the nervous system, or brain, or to head injury.

In many instances there have been cases of nervous disorders in the family, but the exact cause has not been determined with certainty. Usually these cases occur during youth or early adult life. Men are affected twice as often as are women.

In a typical case the attack of sleep occurs without cause and may come just after the patient is awakened after a sound sleep or while he is at work. In most instances, however, the attack comes under circumstances which are likely to produce sleep—for example, after the patient had had a heavy lunch on a warm day after he has been riding in a motor car or bus, or listening to dull lecture.

The attack will be preceded by a sudden feeling of fatigue and if the patient tries hard, he may resist the attack but eventually the sleepiness may prove uncontrollable. The sleep may last only a few seconds or a few minutes but in some cases, if undisturbed these patients will sleep for hours.

Fortunately very few people who suffer these attacks die of them unless as a result of an accident. In 1930 an investigator found that the product called ephedrine sulfate was useful in the treatment of this condition and benefit seems to be obtained in many cases by the use of this remedy.

A more modern remedy is benzedrine sulfate which also seems to produce relief. Inasmuch, however, as these remedies are highly powerful drugs, they should never be used except under the advice of a physician who will prescribe the dosage.

the number of times that the remedy is to be taken daily or nightly and other factors which are necessary to prevent harm from the use of such powerful remedies.

The Happiest Heart
Who drives the horses of the sun
Shall lord it but a day;
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humble way.

The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Ay, none shall nail as high his name
Time will not tear it down.

The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,

Farm Legislation
The legislative program being sponsored by the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation and organization plans for the county organization were discussed at the Hempstead County Farm Bureau meeting at the city hall Saturday morning under the direction of H. H. Huskey, president.

Seven of the ten members of the board of directors were present with 19 other members of the organization in attendance.

T. A. Cornelius, chairman of the seed committee reports that lespeze seed had been made available to the organization through the seed committee at a definite saving to the members. At the present time $900 pounds of soy and 2,700 pounds of corn has been taken by the membership. The seed is here now and may be secured at any time. Farm Bureau members who desire seed are to contact the county agent's office where a deposit may be made and seed secured before the 15th of February.

Lee Garland, secretary of the County Farm Bureau, reported that contacts had been made with county representatives in the state legislature and that they had agreed to help in the passage of Senate Bill No. 12 which transfers inspection of feed and fertilizer from the revenue department to the State Plant Board and furnishes state funds for the operation of the Extension Service and experiment stations. Mr. Garland reported that a group of millers and manufacturers were opposing the bill probably because the Arkansas farmers throughout the state are demanding that when they purchase feed and fertilizer it contains exactly what the tag says it contains. This bill also received a favorable vote from the house agricultural committee and "doubtless will come up for a vote Monday or Tuesday of this week."

A. B. Weatherington, vice-president of the County Farm Bureau and superintendent of Bluffs schools endorsed and urged the passage of house bill No. 138 known as the Rural School Management bill. The County Farm Bureau passed a resolution endorsing and urging the passage of the bill. This bill does not propose to increase taxes. It provides for a board of rural school managers selected by the school district directors of the county. This county board of rural school managers shall direct the program of rural school improvement in the county. The bill also provides for a fund to be used to pay school districts for school services rendered to rural children. This service is to be in the form of tuition and transportation.

Mr. Adams, county agent, discussed the Uniform Grading, Labeling, and Packing Law and stated that the law was being sponsored by the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation as a result of a resolution passed at the state convention last November. The Farm Bureau called a conference of representatives of various commodities. After a lengthy discussion, only peach, tomato, and strawberry growers decided that they wanted legislation at this time. Later the strawberry growers, who had been asked to write their proposed regulations, decided to let the matter alone at this time. To tomato growers from the Ozark region and from Southern Arkansas were unable to get together on proposed legislation and agreed at a second conference that since they were unable to agree it would be unfair to ask the Farm Bureau to sponsor legislation for such a law. Peach growers from Southwestern Arkansas and those from Crowley's Ridge attended a senate agriculture committee differed on several phases of the plan, but later in the evening held a conference and ironed out the difficulties. They have recommended passage of the bill.

While there have been no official communications with the Farm Bureau, it is reported that peach growers in the Johnson county area are not in sympathy with the proposed law and will oppose it. If all of the peach growers in the state are unable to agree on this bill, the Farm Bureau will be forced to assume a neutral position in the matter.

This measure is intended to keep Arkansas "culls" off out-of-state markets and to prevent bulk shipments of peaches. Only U. S. No. 1, U. S. No. 2 and a "Utility Pack" (20 percent of No. 1 and not more than 10 percent under No. 2) would be permitted to move in interstate commerce. Each basket would be labeled as to quality and minimum size of contents and bear the name and address of the

Eyeing Girls This Man's Profession

George Hale Referred to as the Successor of Ziegfeld

NEW YORK—Every now and then a slim, rather handsome man emerges from a midtown hotel and goes snooping about the streets, eyeing every pretty girl with an intent stare.

Some of them resent it, more of them are merely curious as to the identity of the searcher. Those he stops are flattered—for the chap's name is George Hale and in Europe, South America and right here at home, they are already referring to him as the successor to Ziegfeld as a discoverer of beauty.

There are collectors who can discern the hand of genius in a dust-covered old canvas and others who can visualize the glittering or brilliant of a diamond in the nondescript mass of the rough gem. Hale is blood brother to these. For often the girls he stops seem to have nothing extraordinary to commend them and yet when they appear on stage they are ladies of beauty and glamour.

Face Fancier
Naturally, Hale has had lots of unusual experiences in the quest for beauty, for he disdains the ordinary chorus girl. He found Vera Devine working as a waitress; now she sways in the show girls section of the Paradise Restaurant revue. Barbara Daly came to him from behind a counter in a Boston department store. Once he sat in a certain restaurant frequented by models for days on end waiting for a fresh face. And he found Margaret James.

He looks almost exclusively at the face. The body can be dressed up, but the face is on its own. He has had bow-legged girls in his shows and one whose body was scarred by an accident in infancy. Among all the undressed showgirls she alone wore clothes but the high beauty of her face carried her through. Hale likes to teach girls to dress, what make up to wear. He gets a thrill out of the gradual emergence from just a pretty girl to a glamorous one.

The other day, he stepped into a drug store while walking with Barbara Daly and bought her a new shade of lipstick and a new shade of every thing. He took Miss Devine to dress shops and showed her what to buy.

grower. The inspections would be self-sustaining and no increased taxation would be necessary. The State Plant Board would handle the inspection. Growers interested in the measure state that it would not discriminate in any way against the small grower.

There is nothing in the bill relative to the inspection of watermelons as has been rumored over the county the past week. It is the policy to sponsor no law that growers do not want and write themselves.

A membership committee composed of W. V. Frazier of Washington; Riley Levallan of Shover Springs; and the third member to be appointed by the above member was appointed. This committee will complete the plans for an intensive organization drive which was started last week with the assistance of H. S. Mobley, a member of the State Farm Bureau Board.

No More Glamor for War Planes

Chromium Trimmings to Be Eliminated, Cut War-Dog Cost

By PRESTON Grover
WASHINGTON — In his national defense message to Congress, the President asked $300,000,000 to buy 3,000 airplanes for the Army, but figures have been presented to him indicating that as many as 4,000 may be bought for the same under mass production methods.

Those figures apparently are the basis for the sentence in his message reading: "This ($300,000,000) should provide a minimum increase of 3,000 planes, but it is hoped that orders placed on such a large scale will materially reduce the unit cost and actually provide many more planes."

Old line aviators are simply horrified at some of the innovations proposed in mass production. They have been attuned to fancy work craft with every part polished and finished in chromium and hand tested for perfection. Mass production plans won't allow for that.

First off, it is too expensive. Second, it is too slow.

This correspondent has seen some of the costly new planes with the hide removed and they are models of beauty and polish, inside and out. Every strut has evidently been hand finished, or at least finished to a degree requiring much personal attention by a mechanic.

Plan Paid off For Nazis
Reports coming in to government sources from Germany have indicated that the Nazi plane manufacturers long ago gave up such perfection of detail. The result was to contribute to the Fatherland an air industry capable of frightening fellow European nations into all sorts of queer acceptances.

The same reports say that German planes are being built for small men. Big men can't get into the closely fitted cockpits of their fighting planes. The idea is to haul fewer pounds of Nazi and more pounds of fighting equipment.

Yankee designs for several years have made the cockpit tight, but there has yet been no intimation that lightweight and feather-weight fighting men were preferred.

But the elimination of unessential finishing on parts going into the body of the plane has been advised here in the interest of economy and speed. There are 5,000 different kinds of parts in an ordinary airplane, and if fine touches can be eliminated even for a fair percentage of these, costs obviously will drop.

Some Army-Navy Dissension
Further, both the Army and Navy have known for years that they have had to pay heavily in overhead charges because of the limited number of each design of the plane they could

Some Army-Navy Dissension
Further, both the Army and Navy have known for years that they have had to pay heavily in overhead charges because of the limited number of each design of the plane they could buy. The President's program calls for buying larger numbers of each type. Moreover, just the fact that a manufacturer can keep his whole plant busy for sustained periods is expected to contribute to the cost reduction as well as the speed-up.

Of course the suggestion that the government is going to be able to buy somewhere near 4,000 planes for the old time cost of 3,000 isn't going to convince Congress altogether that the armament program is necessarily a good thing. There is a reported division within the War Department over the military advisability of such an abrupt expansion as the President proposes. Moreover, there is a suspicion of Navy dissension at the prospect of the Army getting such a fat-cat in the way of appropriations. These things filter into congressional ears to create opposition.

There is already intimation that a minor compromise with the Navy has been effected. The Army was bidding for a clear half billion. It didn't get it. The Navy got a cut. The President asked for $552,000,000 but suggested $65,000,000 of this for Navy purposes. The Army would get $487,000,000. (The balance would go for Canal Zone work and for training civilian pilots.) The Army feels that the Navy "got its" last year in the "billion dollar" building program.

Being a good Samaritan proved profitable for C. J. Borman, Transvaal farmer. Injured motorists whom he drove 200 miles to hospital pressed a Rhodesian sweepstake ticket upon him. It paid $470.

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warm cloth. VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors.

This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion.

Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over.

Prize Rookies of 1938 Have Stuff to Beat Sophomore Jinx

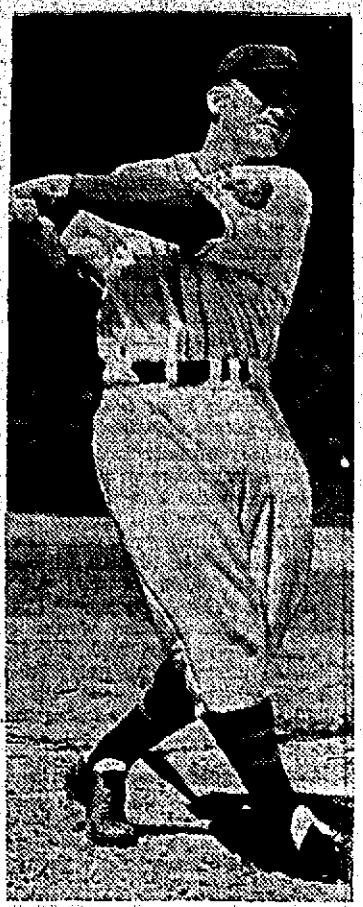

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

The second year frequently is the toughest for a young player who has obtained a flying start in the majors. But managers see no cause for concern in regard to the brighter newcomers of 1938.

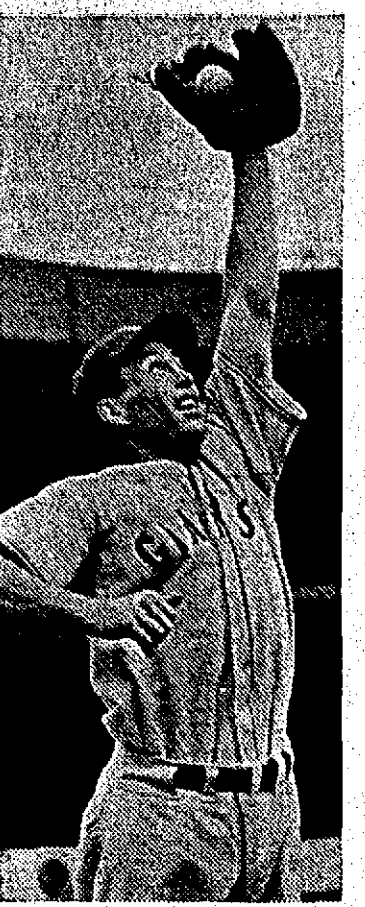

The more prominent of these are Joe Gordon of the Yankees; Jeff Heath, Kenny Keltner, and Johnny Humphries of the Indians; George Myatt of the Giants; Bobby Doerr, Jim Bagby, Jr., and Emerson Dickman of the Red Sox; Johnny Rizzo and Bob Klingner of the Pirates; George Washington Case, Jr., Kendall Chase, Taft Wright, Phil Leonard, and Joe Kraskauskas of the Senators; Sam Chapman of the Athletics; Ernie Koy and Goodwin Rosen of the Dodgers; Frank McCormick and Harry Craft of the Reds; George McQuinn of the Browns; and Chet Laabs and Harry Eisenstat of the Tigers.

Gordon had competent critics comparing him with Eddie Collins before he struck the American League. Once he hit his stride last spring, he quickly made Yankee supporters forget Tony Lazzeri. Blessed with all the physical requirements of a great second baseman... including power... he should fairly roar along with a season's experience under his belt.

Yanks Pick Heath as Batting Champ

Jeff Heath

George Myatt

Joe Gordon

Even the Yankees, famed for their manhandling of pitchers and big innings, pick Heath as an American League batting champion. In his first season, the husky Seattle slugger in 128 games manufactured 21 home runs, 18 triples, and 31 doubles in compiling an average of .343... only a half dozen points in back of Jimmy Foxx, the real leader.

It was Keltner, more than any other individual who kept the Cleveland club in front longer than the Redskins usually remain there. The Milwaukee third baseman's average dropped to .276 (toward the flag end, but not until he had amassed the better part of 286 total bases, which included 31 doubles and 26 home runs.

Humphries has the size and easy delivery of the standout righthander.

Myatt is hailed as the Giants' slickest third baseman since Freddie Lindstrom. The San Diego flyer has the spring of the star infielder. He had the usual experience of joining the Polo Grounders in midseason and compiling higher batting, .306, and fielding averages in the National than he had with Jersey City in the International.

Myatt, perhaps is the fastest base runner in the game... stole 45 bases with the Skeeters and 10 with the Giants.

A year older, Bobby Doerr should have the stamina, lack of which handicapped him at times in 1938. Pitchers Bagby and Dickman are splendid right-handed prospects.

Rizzo gave Pittsburgh the right-handed batting power it lacked. Bob Klingner's curve should keep him around some time.

Chapman Should Snap Out of Slump

Case of Washington has terrific speed and Wright a poisonous shillalah. Dutch Leonard, and the knicker that returned him to the big time are useful. Bucky Harris has a pair of potential left-handed handoff kings in Chase and Kraskauskas, and Detroit another in Harry Eisenstat.

Sam Chapman of the Athletics slumped toward the end of the grind, but has too natural a stroke not to be a real good hitter. Koy of Brooklyn has blazing speed, but both the Indian and Keltner must improve their batting.

Chuck McCormick, who fooled so many scouts to win an all-star berth in his initial campaign, appears as solid as a dollar. Craft's speed and cleverness as a flycatcher stands him in good stead, although an outfielder should hit considerably better than

Another Knockout for Montgomery

Grady Flynn Floored in Fourth Round at Hot Springs

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—Lloyd Montgomery, Bauxite, heavyweight champion of the South, successfully defended his title by knocking out Grady Flynn of Greenwood, Miss., in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round main event here Monday night.

The punch that knocked Flynn several feet against the ropes and then to the floor was a short right hook to the jaw.

Until Montgomery put over the K. O., the fight had all been Flynn's although he was outwitted several rounds. The Greenwood boy had little respect for the Arkansas champion. He shaded Montgomery in the first and became more confident in the second. He put over several hard rights, one of which sent Monty's rubber mouthpiece flying from his mouth. Flynn smacked Montgomery all over the ring, jarring him repeatedly. He had a straight, accurate left that found its mark on Montgomery's face almost every time he shot it.

In the third round Flynn landed a terrific right on the side of the champion's head, opening a cut beneath Monty's eye and again causing the mouthpiece to pop out. The big crowd, surprised at the showing of the youngster, started rooting for him. Flynn won the second and third rounds by wide margins.

Monty Lands K. O.

The fourth had gone about a minute when Montgomery saw an opening. He had been spitting blood before he left his corner. Montgomery landed and down went Flynn. He took a count of eight and was groggy when he got to his feet. Montgomery sailed in for the kill but a second in Flynn's

Swan Mentioned as Temple Coach

Former Stanford Star Is Likely to Succeed Pop Warner

PHILADELPHIA.—(AP)—Fred Swan, former Stanford football star and for the past six years assistant to Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, was mentioned most prominently Monday in speculation on the successor to the "Old Fox" as head football coach at Temple University.

Warner, 68-year-old gridiron strategist, announced his resignation Sunday night at his home in Palo Alto, Calif. His three-year contract with the Owls would have expired at the end of this year.

Temple University's athletic council, said it was "reluctant" to accept Warner's resignation.

Both Swan and Backfield Coach Charles "Chuck" Winterborn, who signed three-year contracts at the same time as Warner, will be retained.

A well-informed university source said there was little question Swan would be named and would be permitted to select his own assistants.

Swan is known to have been recommended by Warner. The 35-year-old assistant, who captained the 1926 Stanford team, has been line coach at Temple and served in similar capacity at Colgate and Wisconsin.

PHILADELPHIA—There should be no complaint about the lighting system on the part of fans or players, when night baseball makes its bow in Chibe Park this year. Engineer E. B. Karna calls the enclosure the "brightest flood-light stadium to be found anywhere in the world."

The 780 lights will carry candlepower of 2,000,000 beams, and are sufficiently strong to brighten a highway running from Philadelphia to Cleveland.

Players in particular should have no difficulty, says Karna, because the lights will be guarded by 20-inch aluminum reflectors which will give a light 10 times better than the average reader has at home.

New York's "Over-Counter" Life Insurance Is Expected to Prove a Good Policy

By PAUL ROSS
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—The nation's most populous state, already famous as the home of advanced social legislation, has launched another service of its own "one-third" who are ill-housed, ill-clothed, ill-fed—and not insured. Under a law passed by the 1938 New York Legislature, three savings banks—two in Manhattan—were licensed to be "selling low-cost, over-the-counter" life insurance policies.

New Yorkers are quick to respond to the new opportunity. In only five recent business days for instance, over one-half million dollars worth of policies were sold.

The Empire State's system is similar to the Massachusetts system originally introduced in 1907 by Louis D. Brandeis, now a associate justice of the U. S. Supreme Court. Today, there are 26 savings banks selling insurance in Massachusetts on this plan.

In the opinion of Louis H. Pink, New York State Superintendent of Insurance, the new system will prove to be "a wholesome influence" in the insurance field.

The system is based on the idea that if commissions to salesmen and co-

Plumber Charles Kell (left) buys the first over-the-counter policy from the Lincoln Savings Bank, Brooklyn, and receives congratulations from the bank president Charles Brock.

SERIAL STORY NO TIME TO MARRY

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

At last Janet realized she loved him. She told him how much she needed him. Then Cynthia returned and she had changed too. Janet found.

CHAPTER XXI

NOW Cynthia went on with a hesitation unusual for her. "I saw the papers, Jan. Of course I'm glad—about you and Barney. I do hope you're really happy. But I was surprised."

"I was a little surprised, myself," Janet said, patting a sofa pillow into place, holding her eyes carefully on what she was doing. "Of course we should have waited longer if we had known you and Mr. Benton would be at home so soon, Cyn. But Aunt Mary had particularly asked that we shouldn't postpone the ceremony because of—on her account."

But how is Timothy?

She was thinking that in a few moments she must say something to Cynthia about the bills for Aunt Mary's illness and burial. She hated to; but they were enormous—the hospital bill alone had been staggering—and Aunt Mary's small bank account had long ago melted away. She couldn't expect Barney to shoulder the whole expense. Cynthia wouldn't want him to, of course.

Cynthia stood up abruptly as if Janet's question about her husband had suddenly recalled her to an urgent present.

"I must get back to Tim, Janet. He had a temperature this morning. He caught cold on the train, and on top of all his other worry, it's got him down. I—I never saw Tim sunk before. It scares me, Jan."

"Worry?" Janet asked a little blankly. "You mean about Aunt Mary?"

Cynthia, who had stooped to pick up her hat, turned incredulously.

"You don't mean that you haven't heard, Jan?" she demanded. "It was all in the papers."

"What, Cyn? I—honestly, I don't know."

"I suppose you wouldn't. I didn't know myself until yesterday that Hallowell and Benton haven't been making any money for the last six months. And you see, everything else Tim had was invested in oil. Well, the other day the oil company blew up. We're practically flat, Jan."

So that was it.

Janet cried softly, "Oh, Cynthia!" And again, "Oh, Cynthia, my dear!"

It seemed the most grotesque of ironies that this should have happened to Cynthia. How doubly tragic to have staked everything on a marriage with a man you did not really love, playing for ease and security, and then to have not even these!

A man you did not really love! And what have I done? Janet thought. I'm no better than Cynthia.

Without turning from the mirror where she had been arranging her hat, Cynthia said abruptly, with one of those flashes of insight which made her so unpredictable, "I know what you're thinking, Jan—that having married Tim for his money, as of course I did, I'm probably getting ready to lie on the floor and kick and scream over the mess I've got myself into."

Janet, who had been thinking exactly that, could find no immediate words.

"But perhaps you remember," Cynthia went on, facing Janet, her dark head high, "that first night—when Tim got so beautifully plastered—I told you then that I'd made my bargain and I'd stick to it. Well, that still goes."

"And now I've got to run."

"Cynthia, wait!" Janet called swiftly. "Where is he?"

"At the Templeton House."

"Can you move him safely?"

"I don't believe moving him could possibly be so bad for him as staying there. It's noisy, and he hates hotels, anyhow."

"Then you must bring him here, Barney and I were only staying anyhow until you got back. There are so many places vacant now that it won't take me more than a few hours to find a furnished apartment that will do us beautifully until we can get really settled. And the rent's paid here for the rest of the month. Cynthia, most of it with Timothy Benton's money—but I suppose you know that. I only found it out by accident. Aunt Mary never did know."

CYNTHIA did not speak for a long time. When Janet, wondering, turned to look at her cousin, she saw that her sensitive mouth was quivering like a little girl's, and that the eyes that always used to be so carefully amused were flooded with tears.

"I didn't know, either. Tim's like that," Cynthia said. "When he does something kind, he hates to have anyone know anything about it. Janet, he's the kindest man I ever knew."

Janet said, "I know, Cynthia. I think I knew the first time I saw him that he was like that. . . . Aunt Mary knew, too. She told Barney that you'd used your head for the first time in your life when you married him."

"Did she? I'm glad. . . . I wanted to write her the truth, Jan; but—well, I know you both thought I was always playing-acting. And I was. You see, it's always

Shadow of "Realism" Seen Dimming Child's Pleasure in Classical Fairy Tales

When I was little, I loved fairy tales. Most children did love them in those days, and a lot of them do still. But I find some difference in this newer generation. So many children seem to prefer tales about real people and adventures.

They like their fairy tales skillfully made to sound like fact. In the old days we swallowed the djinns, fairy god-mother and witches whole, and the Seven Dwarfs, for instance, that drew record crowds. That is true, but perhaps you would not sit down and read that story unless it was acted. Not thumb it over and over and take it to bed with you at night. Children still love to see fairy-tales acted.

And most likely, mother, you are saying, "Why our Andy and Grace eat up the Oz books." Of course they do, and all books of their kind. That is because Dorothy is a real child to them, and they are clever narratives that make impossible fiction so possible. Any of the books grouped under this head will always be favorites.

So will animal stories that come under the head of fairy tales. I do not mean that our youngsters have

Marking the Success Of Americas at Lima

THE Eighth Pan-American Conference, concluded recently at historic old Lima, Peru, achieved a new high in the solidarity of the Americas.

With the significant Declaration of Lima, the North and South were brought closer together, it is believed, than they have been at any time in many decades. Diplomats viewed it highly important that so many nations unanimously backed the American principles of freedom and equality of commercial intercourse.

Thus the way is paved for an internal progress of the Americas along peaceful lines. Recognizing the need for a form of continental solidarity, the nations at Lima followed friendly domestic lines. There was no vast armament agreement, no pact of military defense such as might have characterized a European conference of this sort.

To mark the success of the Lima conference, the Peruvian government issued a series of special postage stamps. Released only when the conference was ended, the stamps are a fitting memorial to the most generally successful of all recent attempts to unify the two Americas, North and South.

One of the stamps is shown above. It pictures the new national government palace on the Plaza de Armas at Lima, with the presidential bodyguard troops drawn up before it.

Winter Winds, Hot Rooms Dry Out Your Hair and Skin

By ALICA HART
NEA Service Staff Writer

Ven thought she has no intention of being outdoors a great deal during the winter months, the wise girl knows that she must spend more time at beauty routines from December to March, than she does at any other season of the year. This is, if her skin is to stay soft and smooth, hands equally smooth and hair glossy and healthy.

Over-exposure to icy winds mars the texture of an otherwise lovely complexion, of course. But over-heated rooms where the humidity is less than 40, play as much, if not more, havoc with your skin as the below-zero weather outdoors. And wearing a hat so much of the time isn't exactly conducive to keeping your hair as lovely as a movie star's.

You should, of course, keep the radiator pans in your home filled with water or buy special humidifiers—some of which are fairly inexpensive. Lacking radiator pans or humidifiers, of both, place jars of water in inconspicuous corners all over the house and remember to keep them filled.

In addition, brush your hair every night to bring the natural oils from the scalp right down to the dry ends, and don't wear your hat more than is absolutely necessary. If someone in the family gets and uses a sun lamp, as a cold preventive, borrow it once or twice a week and sun your hair and scalp for four or five minutes. Don't let anyone tell you to wash your hair less frequently or that brushing will ruin your permanent. Every type of hair ought to be brushed every day. And a shampoo once a week or at least every ten days, is important.

Substitute Cream for Morning Soap. Unless your skin is oily, clean face and throat with soap and water only at night, using cream for morning and during-the-day cleansings. If you are going out in the evening, cleanse thoroughly with cream, then apply a layer of night cream and leave it on for twenty minutes or half an hour before putting on makeup. And you'll use night cream every night before going to bed, of course.

Now and then massage a bit of the same night cream into your wrists and forearms, and do use hand lotion several times a day. If the skin on your body gets dry and sensitive, invest in a bottle of special after-bath body lotion will pay pretty big dividends.

Finger nails, too, often get brittle, the cuticles dry and unattractive. To alleviate this condition, have your nails soaked in warm oil instead of warm, soapy water during your weekly manicure. They can be held in the warm oil or else wrapped in little oil-soaked strips of cotton for several minutes.

Sight of Salvation Army uniforms restored memory to an amnesia victim in Salisbury, Eng. Harold Earnest Gibbon recalled he had been an Army missionary in China when local ward.

Agricultural economists predicted early in the year that farm families would have more cash to spend in 1939 than they did in 1938.

Hurry-Up Script Asks Hedy Lamarr to Ad Lib "A Funny Line"

HOLLYWOOD.—Short takes: Leslie Howard, cast as Ashley Wilkes in "Gone With the Wind," hasn't read the book and probably won't. He'll be plenty busy with the script. Like too many pictures, the Spencer Tracy-Hedy Lamarr co-starrer, "I Take This Woman," was started without a finished script. Story trouble developed, and the hurried authors are just a couple of lines ahead of the camera, with messengers dashing over to the sound stage bearing additional bits of action and dialogue. One of these sheets contained this instruction: "At this point she (Miss Lamarr) should ad lib a very funny line." These days, the writers are even telling the actors to do their writing for them.

Navy Wings Best Yet—"Wings of the Navy," I believe, is the best service picture ever made. The story and expository material never get in each other's way. "Jesse James" is very elegant film fare too, as entertainment. I wish, though, they had titled it "Joe Doakes" or "Over the Hill to the Box Office" or something. Then it wouldn't be such an outrageous misrepresentation of history.

An English director, Randall Faye, dropped in on Producer Charles Rogers to try to sell a yarn on Canadian history. While they were getting acquainted, the visitor got to talking about those dark hours when a panic-stricken London was digging bomb shelters and watching the skies. Told it so dramatically that Rogers told him to make it into a screen play. They never have discussed the Canadian picture.

Douglas Junior in Musketeers? Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., back for a Carole Lombard picture, "Memory of Love," and then a role as Lancelot in "Knights of the Round Table." Also Papa Fairbanks, if he gets around to making pictures, may present his son in a remake of "The Three Musketeers." The Thomas Edison screen biography may be two features—the first with Mickey Rooney, second with Spencer Tracy. Metro will have to change the climate before it gets Robert Donat to come to Hollywood. He has asthma and can't breathe in the low altitudes of the studios. Walter Pidgeon already is set for a starring part—something called "6000 Enemies." "—And a Girl," probably. Sonja Henie will ski as well as skate in "Everything Happens at Night." Max Baer has been signed for a series of westerns. So help me. Nelson Eddy's footprints are the 50th pair in the forecast of the Chinese Theater. But a man who wouldn't trade places with many of the celebrities who have left their tracks there is Jean Klosser, the cement craftsman who supervises each imprinting job.

Hitler's Old Boss Now Serving Him

Capt. Fritz Wiedemann Is Consul General at San Francisco

By the AP Feature Service
During the World war, Germany's trim, suave Capt. Fritz Wiedemann had under him a brave but bedraggled private with a handlebar mustache. The private, Adolf Hitler, admired his captain.

Today Hitler gives the orders. One of his latest was to send his former commander to San Francisco, as Consul General.

Captain Wiedemann's new assignment surprised diplomats who know how close he has been to Hitler as his personal adjutant. But Germany pool-poos suggestions that he may engage in propaganda work—the official explanation is that he wants to go and that Hitler is rewarding him for past services.

Those past services seemed to be lending to more than a consular post. The tall, erect captain was commander of the 16th Bavaria Infantry Reserve regiment in which Hitler served, first as a private and later as corporal. During Nazism's early years little was heard of the Captain. He slipped into Hitler's inner circle, practically unnoticed. The international spotlight first focused on him during the coronation of King George VI in May, 1937, when he was a member of the German delegation.

Makes Friends
After that trip, Hitler learned the polished captain had a way of making friends with English-speaking people—and Hitler wanted such friends. He

Three times, Basil Rathbone gargled a line in "Hound of the Baskervilles," and Director Sidney Lanfield said impatiently, "Come on, now—nobody could understand what you're saying." "What's the difference?" Rathbone asked. "The dog's going to steal the picture, anyhow."

In "Yes, My Darling Daughter," Warner had a line which pretty obviously referred to President Roosevelt. After glancing through the news from Washington, a big business man growled, "Why don't that guy spend more time with his stamp collection?" The Hays Office blue-penciled the line.

3 Hopes Beckoning to Cotton Farmer

Auto Tires, Cotton Roads, Bagging to Improve Cotton Use

ATLANTA—(AP)—Dixie's cotton planters, who are looking for new or increased uses of their product to aid them in combating a 13,425,000-bale carry-over from last year, are looking hopefully in at least three directions. One is increased use of cotton cord in making automobile tires. Last year this accounted for $20,000,000 worth of lint. A promising development is a new high density cord perfected by a large tire manufacturer. Already more than 18,000,000 miles of cord has been spun by the new method.

Another potential outlet is use of cotton as a binder in the building of bituminous roads. Experiments in this are being conducted in 22 states. The South alone has something like 1,000 miles of cotton roads.

A third increased use is the making of bagging from cotton instead of jute. Approximately 4,500,000 pounds annually may be required for filling an Agricultural Adjustment Administration program that calls for the wrapping of 1,000,000 bales of cotton in cotton bagging.

A scheme of farm painting will be inaugurated in Cape Breton county, Nova Scotia, this year whereby defunct crop plans will be laid out for each farm on a community basis in cooperation with the municipal council.

Operators controlling 7,500 acres of land in the vicinity of Sanford, N.C., announced early in 1939 that large scale coal mining would be resumed in that region.

JOHN S. GIBSON DRUG CO.

sent Wiedemann to America that fall, apparently to check-up on the American attitude toward Germany. What Wiedemann reported isn't known, of course. But his work must have pleased his former corporal. For last July the captain got his hardest assignment. Hitler was clamoring for the "freedom" of Germans in Czechoslovakia. England was getting nervous. The king and queen were going to France as a demonstration of Anglo-French friendship. To head off any interference of his plans by the democracies, Hitler hurriedly dispatched Wiedemann to London.

There the captain had a heart-to-heart talk with Lord Halifax, the foreign minister. What Wiedemann said has never been revealed, outside of an assurance that Hitler "desired to achieve a peaceful settlement of outstanding questions."

But evidently he so impressed Halifax and Prime Minister Chamberlain with the seriousness of the Czech situation that Lord Runciman was sent to investigate. And England and France never did head off Hitler.
